James F. Byrnes, FDR Luminary, Dies

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — James F. Byrnes, who quit school at the age of 14 to help support his widowed mother and later became a congressman, a U.S. Supreme Court justice, U.S. secretary of state, and governor of South Carolina, has died after a long illness.

Byrnes, who reportedly had been in a coma for the past few days, died yesterday at his home here. He was 92.

His body will lie in state in the rotunda of the Statehouse tomorrow and Wednesday. The funeral will be held Wednesday at the Trinity Episcopal Church.

Even to the end Byrnes remained an opponent of court-ordered school desegregation, saying the U.S. Supreme Court "did not interpret the Constitution. The court amended it."

It was Byrnes who at 71 ran for governor of South Carolina to push through a state sales tax to finance separate but equal schools for blacks and whites.

He won the election and instituted his tax and his school plan.

Born in the port city of Charleston, Byrnes was a one-time law office messenger boy, newspaper vendor, and odd-job worker who rose step-by-step until he became "assistant president."

President Franklin D. Roosevelt referred to Byrnes by that title because of the South Carolinian's far-ranging power as head of the Office of War Mobilization during World War II. Byrnes was once considered as a possible running mate for Roosevelt. But in 1944, fearful that a Southern vice presidential candidate would hurt his chances for reelection, Roosevelt made a last-minute choice of Sen. Harry S. Truman of Missouri for the Democratic ticket.

The death of Byrnes brought an order from President Nixon that flags be flown at half-staff.

Mrs. Maud Delmont

ALLENHURST — Mrs. Maud Conover Delmont, 92, 307 Speer Ave. died Saturday in the Conva-Center, Neptune.

She was born in Ocean Township and lived in this area most of her life.

Mrs. Delmont's husband, Paul Delmont, died in 1964.

She is survived by five nephews and three nieces.

The Flock Funeral Home, Long Branch, is in charge of arrangements.
