Coaches Order Signals, Kicking and Working Out Plays—Gamache Serious Prospect for End.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 28.—Notwithstanding that there was no scrimmage for Harvard's football players on Saturday, the varsity coaches again devoted today's session to signal drill, kicking, receiving kicks, and to working out plays in soft scrimmage array. The weather was so warm and so much hard work already has been done that the workout, although continuously active, was not very hard.

The chief interest today was the permanent placing of Leo Daley, last year's best guard, on the right side of the Crimson rush line. Daley is now fully eligible to play and so far his knee has shown no signs of being weakened by last year's accident.

Ernest Gamache, who has been one of the substitute centres, is now being seriously thought of as a prospect for end. He played on a wing during part of the last season and many were surprised when he was not considered for the position when the Harvard squad reported this Fall. Gamache is a player who seems able to keep in the game without injuries. There is no question of Harvard being weak at end this Fall.

Ned Mahan spent a lot of time with the kickers and today also did a lot of kicking himself to the several sets of backs, who caught his punts with the varsity ends coming down the field.

Captain Cheek spent the entire afternoon playing quarterback, having Coady, Howe and Crosby as his backfield. Miller was excused from practice and Howe was in his place.

The candidates for the freshman team reported to Coach Campbell this afternoon, there being 173 players in the squad but no large proportion of very husky material.
