ABC Board Asks Hike In Fines

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Alcoholic Beverage Control Board member Ronald Harrod is asking the state Legislature to increase the amount of fines for repeated violation of the state's liquor laws.

Harrod says punishment now is a mere tap on the wrist.

He wants the legislature to let the agency levy fines of $100 to $500 to punish liquor dealers who flagrantly ignore the law, Harrod said. Those fines would be in addition to any penalties the individual might have to pay if convicted of liquor law violations in criminal court.

One reason heavier fines are needed is to force liquor dealers to obey laws such as the one that prohibits selling liquor to minors, one of the state's most abused liquor laws, Harrod said.

"Our letters of warning apparently mean nothing to them, and the probationary periods are just a joke."

"And those probationary periods have been our big whip, so you can see that we haven't been hurting anyone," Harrod said.

At least six other state agencies have similar authority to use fines to enforce state laws and administrative rules and regulations, he said.

"I think this is a very good way to gain compliance," he said.

Charles Stuart, dubbed Bonnie Prince Charlie and the Young Pretender, entered Edinburgh in 1745 and was crowned king of Scotland. Charles raised 6,000 men and began a march on London. The army, however, was forced back at Derby and the 2,000 survivors were annihilated at the battle of Culloden. Charles fled to France where he died in exile.
