

Innovative social worker Hailperin, 88

Former Pittsburgher Celia Moss Hailperin, credited with beginning the nation's first home-care social work program while working at Montefiore Hospital is being mourned here following her death at age 88 in Honolulu.

She was director of Montefiore's Social Service Department from 1945-1970. She was awarded the Outstanding Social Worker of the Year in 1970 from the National Association of Social Workers.

After her retirement from Montefiore, she was director of continuing education at Pitt's School of Social Work. Additionally, she was project director of research activities for US Children's Bureau for Chronically Ill Children, the National Institutes of Health Heart Institute and the Pa. Health Department.

After moving to Honolulu, she helped found the Kokua Council for Senior Citizens and Hawaii Senior Net, and was a board member of the VISTA program and advisor to the Honolulu Gerontology Program.

She was the widow of the late Rabbi Herman Hailperin of Tree of Life Synagogue.

She is survived by a son Richard of Los Angeles, three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Interment was in Tree of Life Memorial Park, Franklin Park. The family suggests memorial donations to the Tree of Life Endowment Fund in memory of Rabbi Hailperin or the Gaile Kurren Scholarship Fund, University of Hawaii Foundation, University of Hawaii, Honolulu, HI 96822.

Israel cancer research group makes discovery

NEW YORK -- Dr. Eli Canaani, whose pioneering cancer research was supported for 10 years by the Israel Cancer Research Fund (ICRF), is co-author of a new study on leukemia which was recently published in the journal "Cell."

Dr. Canaani and Dr. Carlo Croce, both working at the Jefferson Cancer Institute at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia, have discovered a gene on chromosome 11 which participates in a series of exchanges with genes on other chromosomes resulting in each case in the development of childhood or adult acute leukemia.

Graveside services and interment were held Beth Shalom Cemetery. Arrangements by Ralph Schugar Chapel, Inc.

Within a year or two, they hope that tests based on the discovery will allow doctors to measure very small quantities of leukemic cells remaining in treated patients who would otherwise be thought to be disease-free. If such residual disease is discovered, further treatment can be given to produce a true cure.

"We also hope," says Dr. Canaani, "that drugs developed against the product of the defective gene will be eventually used in treatment."
